

Adventures of PATCH

Adventures of PATCH

Two canonical stacked lockups, one master wordmark, one disciplined system.

One identity, three valid assets

Choose by composition. The two series lockups are peers; neither is intrinsically primary or secondary.

STANDALONE PATCH

The wordmark 'PATCH' in a bold, black, slab-serif typeface.

SERIES LOCKUP / CONTROL

The word 'Adventures of' in a smaller, black, sans-serif font above the word 'PATCH' in the same bold, black, slab-serif typeface.

SERIES LOCKUP / CLIFF DROP

Standalone PATCH

The existing master wordmark remains valid wherever the series name is already clear or PATCH needs to stand alone.

Control lockup

The disciplined architectural treatment. Use it when formal calm, immediate reading and a compact title silhouette best serve the composition.

Cliff-drop lockup

The narrative treatment. Use it where the identity can carry a quiet second reading without needing an explanation beside it.

Identity rule

Do not replace, redraw or deprecate the standalone PATCH wordmark. Use a series lockup only when Adventures of belongs in the mark itself.

A small number of strong lines

The geometry comes from PATCH. If a variation needs straight-line spaghetti to justify itself, it is off-system.

Control

The image shows the text 'Adventures of PATCH' in a bold, black, sans-serif font. The word 'Adventures' is on the top line, 'of' is on the second line, and 'PATCH' is on the third line. Dashed lines indicate the construction of the text: a vertical dashed line marks the start of 'Adventures', another marks the end of 'of', and a third marks the start of 'PATCH'. Horizontal dashed lines mark the top of 'Adventures', the middle of 'of', and the top of 'PATCH'. A solid horizontal line marks the baseline of 'PATCH'.

Verticals: 1% optical start, right edge of T, sharp right edge of C. Horizontals: strapline foot and the five-unit seam above PATCH.

Cliff drop

The image shows the text 'Adventures of PATCH' in a bold, black, sans-serif font. The word 'Adventures' is on the top line, 'of' is on the second line, and 'PATCH' is on the third line. Dashed lines indicate the construction of the text: a vertical dashed line marks the start of 'Adventures', another marks the end of 'of', and a third marks the start of 'PATCH'. Horizontal dashed lines mark the top of 'Adventures', the middle of 'of', and the top of 'PATCH'. A solid horizontal line marks the baseline of 'PATCH'.

Verticals: the same three anchors. Horizontals: upper e crossbar to dropped-s top, then dropped-s foot to the T cap.

The cliff is structural

Adventure resolves on the T edge. The final s moves vertically only. Its top and bottom land on existing letterform datums. of ends on C. H stays free.

Cohesion survives ordinary use

The cliff-drop candidate was compared cleanly with the control. The explanatory grid was absent from every use test.

Result: the dropped s pins Adventures back to PATCH at every tested size. At 132 px the story recedes, but the lockup remains coherent.

Keep the intervention quiet

The marks are identity assets first. The cliff-drop story should reward attention rather than demand it.

Use

- Choose control or cliff drop in situ. Neither is a default fallback for the other.
- Keep each SVG indivisible. Scale and recolour the whole mark; never address or rearrange letters.
- Use a single high-contrast colour. No Adventures palette has been established yet.
- Retain breathing room between Adventures and of, the C termination, and the deliberately free H.
- Treat 132 px as the established checked width. Re-test before going smaller.

Banned treatments

- Do not substitute an unrelated or site font for the outlined strapline.
- Do not centre or align the strapline without a PATCH-derived datum.
- Do not close the word gap, terminate on H, or erase the PAT/C/H relationships.
- Do not enlarge the strapline until it competes with PATCH.
- Do not stretch, squash, skew, warp or redraw either licensed letterform.
- Do not anthropomorphise the s. It did not jump, pose or perform. The ground gave way.
- Do not use low-contrast colour combinations or uncontrolled spacing.

The cliff drop is a quiet echo of the wider 'Patch can be anything' premise: one edge gives way and another adventure begins. It must stay latent, not become a visual joke. No formal clear-space rule or wider colour system is claimed in this edition.

Custody travels with the assets

The repository contains static brand artwork. The licensed font software and purchase records remain private and local.

Source faces

- PATCH: ITC Serif Gothic Std Black, Version 2.000 Build 1000.
- Adventures of: ITC Serif Gothic Std ExtraBold, Version 2.000 Build 1000.
- Designers: Herb Lubalin and Antonio DiSpigna. Manufacturer: Monotype ITC Inc.
- Vendor and licensor: MyFonts / Monotype. Verified basis: Monotype Font Software For Desktop EULA v250903, supplied with both locally retained order archives.

Published package

- adventures-of-patch-control.svg and adventures-of-patch-cliff-drop.svg each contain one compound path. No glyph remains individually addressable.
- No OTF, TTF, WOFF, encoded font data, linked local font or font subset is committed.
- This PDF uses non-embedded PDF Base-14 Helvetica for prose and the committed static outlines for every brand mark.
- The package is housed in HarleyBartles/portfolio for now and is designed to migrate intact to the Adventures repository later.

Licence evidence stays private. Public metadata records the verified basis without publishing order identifiers, purchase paperwork or font binaries.
